Ethical Standards for using Firm's IT & electronic communications

Ethics Standards for using of Firm IT & Electronic Communications

Employee Responsibility

- You must not conduct your personal business activities using company's IT or communication facilities, or support others to do so.
- You must only use approved internet-based services (whether commercial, consumer or free-to-use) to store, process or share business information as defined in the company policy.
- You must also play your part in protecting company's shared assets – such as a photocopier or a building. Although you are not personally accountable or liable for these, you should help to look after them and, if someone else is putting them at risk or using them inappropriately, intervene or report the matter.
- You must identify the privacy risks before collecting, using, retaining or disclosing personal data, such as in an IT system, project or report the matter.
- You must use company's brands and trademarks appropriately
- You must not misuse confidential information of a third party.

Ethics Standards for using of Firm IT & Electronic Communications

- If you notice that a third party is infringing or misusing Company IP rights, for example by passing on documents containing confidential information, it is the duty of that person to speak up.
- You must not engage with the media on behalf of the company without disclosure clearance from the Managing Partner.
- You must not use personal social media accounts for disclosing confidential business information or other business purposes.
